Chemical Analysis as Applied to the Examination of Medicinal Chemicals: A Guide for the Determination of Their Identity and Quality, and for the Detection of Impurities and Adulterations Although the preparation of most medicinal chemicals has passed away from the laboratory of the pharmacist, and is successfully conducted on a commercial scale in manufacturing establishments, yet the responsibility for the identity and quality of medicines, and of the substances used in their preparation, rests properly and legally with those who prepare, compound, and dispense them. It is therefore the duty of the pharmacist and the dispensing practitioner of medicine, as also, to a considerable extent, of the druggist and the manufacturing chemist, to examine the medicinal chemicals of commerce as to their identity, quality, and purity. In the exercise of this duty, they have frequent occasion to resort for information to references now widely scattered through chemical, pharmaceutical, and medical manuals and journals; since our literature, although of vast and increasing extent, and crystallizing more and more into distinct branches, is still wanting...
