Excerpt: . PART II.--THE PRACTICAL ISSUE. L Already, perhaps, the reader, in accepting the argument, has recoiled in despair from the vast vista of social reconstruction which it opens up as the only alternative to a long decline towards darkness. He may be moved to cry out with Mr. Lang, and with perhaps the better justification as having really tried to understand the case, that the social problem is insoluble, and that after a few centuries we shall just worry back to barbarism. There is a certain sombre fascination in this species of pessimism that especially captures the belletrist mind, even that mind which, in resentment of other austere philosophies, formulates for itself in the name of mythological science the doctrine of a divine Father who is not far from anyone of us, 1 and is solaced under the pressure of the insoluble social problem...
